Letter from Lydia A. Shrader nee Vogle to Pensioner Commissioner, dated April 22, 1905. It reads as follows: "... I would like to draw your attention to presion claim No. 800316, Wid. Orig. wid. Jacob Vogle, E, 11 U. S. Inf. A. P. Alexander, pension Atty., who was prosecuting my case died, and we have been unable to learn if all the evidence submitted to him was forwarded to Washington. I am in need of this pension to help me along in my old age and am very sincere when I ask how I can set about to secure an allowance since I am a widow the second time. I think you must admit that the first evidence submitted shows clearly that Jacob Vogle, my first husband, was a soldier and all that I claimed him to be. Also, that my son Edward F. Vogle was entitled to a pension until the proper age, as well as myself. I am very sorry that both doctors are dead and I cannot secure their evidence which would surely establish all necessary facts beyond doubt. Being unable to secure their evidence, is there anything else I can do to secure my pension. It would mean so much to me. ..."

Letter from E. E. Jordan of Wibaux, Montana to Bureau of Pensions, dated June 10, 1908. It reads as follows: "... I wish to inquire regarding a pension for my mother, Mrs. Lydia A. Shrader (widow) widow of Jacob Vogle, Co. E, 11 U. S. Inf. We applied for the pension in Feb. 1904 but it was not then allowed, tho(sp) her rights to it was not disputed. Can she not secure a pension under the new law recently passed that all soldier's widows receive a pension regardless of whether they have received any in the ast or not. She is quite old now and would be grateful + feel that she was receiving justice after all these years if it was allowed her now. Would she receive any back pension or would it just begin from the date granted. ..."

Letter from E. E. Jordan of Wibaux, Montana to Commissioner of Pensions, dated July 10, 1908. It reads as follows: "... Regarding your letter of June 23, you say my mother is not entitled to a pension because of her second marriage. She is the soldier's widow and has been a widow over four years since the death the death of my father her second husband. Now we understand that a women who has been a soldier wife (widow) and remarried and again becomes a widow thro(sp) the death of her second husband may draw a pension. This is the exact case of my mother. She had never had a pension at all or her child by soldier husband. But according to Act of April 1908 all soldiers widow were to receive pensions. Why not my mother? ..."

HEADQUARTERS ELEVENTH INFANTRY, Camp near Sharpsburg, Md., September 24, 1862.

SIR: In accordance with instructions from brigade headquarters, I beg to submit the following report of the movements and casualties of the regiment from the 16th instant up to the present time:

The regiment moved from camp near Middletown Heights on the morning of the 16th instant, crossed Middletown Heights, and in the evening camped near Sharpsburg; distance marched, about 8 miles.

On the 17th instant remained in the same position. Private Patrick Clark, of Company G, was struck in the head by a spent grape-shot and wounded slightly. On the 18th remained in the same place without meeting with any casualties. On the morning of the 19th moved forward about 3 miles in the direction of Shepherdstown, and encamped about half a mile from the Potomac River.

On the 20th instant we crossed the Potomac near Shepherdstown, and, after advancing a short distance into the country, Company D was ordered to advance as skirmishers, under command of Lieut. George E. Head. They advanced to the edge of the woods and discovered the enemy in large force moving toward us. We were then ordered to fall back, within we did in good order, the skirmishers of the enemy keeping up a brisk fire during the movements. We halted on a hill close to the river, and replied to the fire of the enemy for some minutes with good effect. At this time Private John J. Boddy, of Company E, was wounded slightly; Private V.S. Wheeler, of Company B, wounded in the groin, and Private John H. Ranson, Company B, wounded in the thigh. The two latter-named men, I regret to add, have since died. We then recrossed the river, pursuant to orders, and encamped a short distance in the woods, where the regiment has remained up to the present date. All of which is most respectfully submitted.

I have the honor to be, sir, your most obedient servant,
DEL. FLOYD-JONES,
Maj. Eleventh Infantry, Commanding Regiment.

Gettysburg after battle report: Report of Maj. De Lancey Floyd-Jones, Eleventh U. S. Infantry. Camp near Berlin, Md., July 16, 1863.

Capt.: In obedience to the circular from brigade headquarters, I have the honor to furnish in brief a report of the operations of the Eleventh U. S. Infantry at the battle of Gettysburg, on the 2d instant. In company with the other battalions of the brigade, we moved about 5 p. m. from our resting place, nearly opposite the center of the army, to near the Sugar Loaf or Round Top Mountain, a point near the left of the line.

Immediately upon reaching this, we were ordered to advance inline of battle, passing from the shelter of a wood across an open field, through which ran a heavy morass. We advanced in good order, although exposed to a flank fire from the enemy, and halted immediately in front of a piece of woods, where we lay some half hour or more. Our brigade then relieved some troops of the Second Corps, for which purpose we advanced into the woods, at the same time changing our direction by a wheel to the left. After firing a few rounds in the woods, it was discovered that the enemy was turning our right flank, and we were ordered to fall back, which was done in good order until we reached half way across the open field, when we became exposed to a cross-fire of the enemy, the effect of which was most deadly upon officers and men. Our loss up to this time had been comparatively slight, but in a few minutes, we lost nearly half of the regiment, and that, too, without inflicting the slightest damage upon the enemy. We finally reached the wood, when we were enabled to reform and face the enemy.

Our loss in this engagement was fearful. Out of 261 enlisted men and 25 officers, the regiment lost 106 enlisted men and 10 commissioned officers, among the latter some of our best officers. Capt. Thomas O. Barri was wounded early in the retreat, and while being kindly assisted to the rear by Lieut. Herbert Kenaston, Eleventh U.S. Infantry, both were struck down. The former lived long enough to die in the arms of his companions. In their loss the regiment mourns two gallant officers. The former had particularly endeared himself by his social and amiable qualities. Second Lieut. Henry Rochford, a promising young officer, fell about the same time, mortally wounded.

The following is a list of the officers who still survive their wounds: First Lieut. Matthew Elder and Second Lieut. A. J. Barber, legs amputated above the knee; Second Lieut. Lemuel Pettee, leg shattered above the ankle; Second Lieut. O. H. Nealy, wounded in neck; Capt. J. M. Goodhue, finger amputated; Capt. W. G. Edgerton, wounded by spent ball (for duty), and Second Lieut. A. A. Harbach, struck in thigh, not seriously.

Where all did so well it is difficult to particularize. I therefore give the names of those officers who participated, in addition to those already enumerated: Capts. George Gibson, C. S. Russell, and Caleb R. Layton; First Lieuts. E. A. Ellsworth, G. E. Head, I. B. Wright, James P. Pratt, Joseph M. Ritner, and F. A. Field, battalion adjutant, and Second Lieuts. E. S. Huntington, R. Robins, J. McIntosh, Wright Staples, and David Hazzard. Capt. Gibson joined us from detached service in time to take part.

*Respectfully,
De L. FLOYD-JONES,
Maj. Eleventh U. S. Infantry, Comdg. Regt.
Acting Assistant Adjutant-Gen.,
Second Brigade, Second Division, Fifth Corps.*
